Make-do and Mend

Make-do and Mend

Plan and Grow for Winter

Planned crops for garden wealth

Assure the family's winter health

Make do and Mend It was a saying aimed at young fashionable women. Silk was used to make clothes but since it was WW2 they also needed it to make parachutes for soldiers so when they jump out of the plane they don't die. This worked incredibly well. Young women got all their old clothes and started re-designing them.

This propaganda poster was aimed at families. Even though the father should've been fighting in war, they wouldn't care less. The seasons are starting to change. It's encouraging to families. It's as if it's telling you to start growing your own food. Your own allotment.

MULTON ARCHIVES

People were shocked at the amount of damage the Germans did. Fred Morley, wanted to show that you shouldn't 'give up'. He first found a backdrop of firefighters fighting the fires, got a milkman outfit and got a tub of milk. Then they took a photo which was later approved by the government even though they knew it was staged.
